Cookie Policy

Achieve UK Training Ltd

Effective date: 4 September 2026
Review Date: December 2027

This Cookie Policy explains how Achieve UK Training Ltd uses cookies and similar technologies on its website.

1. What are cookies?

Cookies are small files that can be stored on your computer, mobile phone, tablet or other device when you visit a website. Cookies can perform different functions, including helping a website operate correctly, remembering preferences, understanding how visitors use the website or providing additional functionality. Similar technologies may also be used to store or access information on a user's device.

2. Why do we use cookies?

Depending on the configuration of our website, cookies may be used to make the website function properly; maintain website security; remember user preferences; improve website performance; understand how visitors use our website; measure website traffic; improve our services and website; and support third-party functionality where applicable. We will only use non-essential cookies where the appropriate consent has been obtained.

3. Categories of cookies

Strictly necessary cookies are required for the website or a particular online service to function and may support security, navigation or session management. Analytics cookies may help us understand website usage and will only be activated where the required consent has been obtained. Preference or functionality cookies may allow the website to remember choices or preferences and will be used only where permitted by applicable law and, where required, after consent. Marketing or advertising cookies, if used, will not be activated without the appropriate consent where consent is required.

4. Third-party cookies

Some features or services on our website may be provided by third parties. These third parties may use cookies or similar technologies. Examples could include website analytics, embedded content, payment services, video services, social media functionality or other external services. Where applicable, the cookie consent mechanism will provide information about relevant third parties before non-essential technologies are activated.

5. Your cookie choices

When required, our website will provide users with an appropriate choice regarding non-essential cookies. You may accept non-essential cookies, reject non-essential cookies, or manage your cookie preferences.

Where a consent mechanism is provided, you should be able to change or withdraw your consent. We will not treat simply continuing to browse the website as consent to non-essential cookies.

6. Browser controls

You can use your web browser settings to manage or delete cookies. Most browsers allow you to view, delete or block cookies, allow cookies, block third-party cookies, or delete cookies when the browser is closed. Blocking strictly necessary cookies may affect the operation of some parts of the website.

7. Cookie information

Because cookies and similar technologies can change when website functionality or third-party services are added or removed, Achieve UK Training Ltd will review the technologies used on the website periodically. The website's cookie list should be kept up to date so that it accurately identifies the name of each cookie or technology, provider, purpose, first- or third-party status, duration, category and whether consent is required.

8. Cookies and personal information

Some cookies or similar technologies may involve information that can be considered personal information, such as an IP address or online identifier. Where this occurs, the processing will also be subject to applicable data protection requirements.

9. Changes to this Cookie Policy

We may update this Cookie Policy when the cookies used by the website change, new website features are introduced, third-party services change, or legal or regulatory requirements change. The latest version will be published on our website.
